Europe – a Chance for Everyone

I came home today to find
My dear mum.
She seemed kinda strange
She looked kinda glum.
My instinct just told me
She was hiding big news.
I asked her to tell me
Why she had the blues.
'You've grown up, young man!'
She smiled first of all.

'Two cases of luggage
Are there in the hall.
I know that for Europe –
Your heart really sings!
We must say goodbye now,
I can't clip your wings.

You've got a future there,
hopefully bright.
But I will just stay here
And pray that you write.'
I hugged her so tightly
And gave her a kiss.
'I know, dearest mother.
Now listen to this.
You can't put in cases
What I'll take in my heart.
I'll never stop loving you
When we're apart.
Yes, Europe, dear
mother,
Is a big chance for me.
But I'll make you so very proud.
Just wait and see!'

Are We Europeans?

We are in Europe, but we've got a long way to get there.... Words, written by Aleko Konstantinov, a Bulgarian author who wrote about Bulgarian lifestyle. He provoked us to ask ourselves, 'What else do we need to become equal?' Bulgaria officially became part of the European Union in 2007. This is when we started regarding ourselves as European citizens and we began receiving benefits from this contract. The world opened ahead of us. But are we ready for this and the horizons and opportunities it will bring to us? We see the differences among us and we build a new scale for comparison – there and here.

Differences between cultures/countries date back from the earliest history, when traditions and customs were shaped to develop through the ages to come. Our country is a bit backward, in some aspects. Our history is long and full of violence and slavery. This is when we fell behind the other European countries...

THE EUROPEAN STAR WARS or The Perfect Galaxy

Once upon a time there was a galaxy in which 28 stars lived. Not all of them had ended up there at the same time. They got together little by little. The first ones were formed after the collapse of a giant cloud and in order not to float alone in space and possibly be run over by a spaceship, they created a union, EUROPE - And Radiant United Stars oriented towards Peace and Love. Little by little other stars got together and the union grew. All the stars were different. Some were bigger, others smaller. Some had graduated many years ago, others were still very young. Some spun quickly, others walked very slowly. And some were more resilient than the others. But they all shone and illuminated the sky equally. They all defended the same values: although different, they all had the same rights and respected each other. Neither was better nor sent more than the other. They could bark loudly when they didn't agree with the route of the night tour. They could present ideas and suggestions at the meetings that took place in each light year. They protected each other when a space shuttle wanted to get them out of the way. They circulated freely in the galaxy, exchanging words with the planets they encountered on their excursions....
